ORDER DENYING MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

Case No. 3:22-cv-116

On April 26, 2022, in response to evolving technical advances in firearms technology, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (the “ATF”) promulgated a final rule updating decades-old definitions within its longstanding regulations of federal firearms laws. See Definition of “Frame or Receiver” and Identification of Firearms, 87 Fed. Reg. 24652 (April 26, 2022) (to be codified at 27 C.F.R. pts. 447, 478, and 479) (the “Final Rule”). At bottom, the Final Rule amends the definitions of certain terms with the ATF’s regulations, such as “frame or receiver,” and amends related ATF regulations on firearm markings and recordkeeping. Id. The Final Rule takes effect on August 24, 2022. Id.

Asserting a theme of unlawful and extreme federal agency overreach, Plaintiffs Morehouse Enterprises, LLC, d/b/a Bridge City Ordnance, Eliezer Jimenez, Gun Owners of America, Inc., and Gun Owners Foundation seek to enjoin the Final Rule from taking effect as scheduled and filed a motion for preliminary and/or permanent injunction, along with a motion for oral argument.¹ Doc. Nos. 14, 19; Doc. No. 25. Defendants the ATF, the United States Department of Justice, and ATF Director Steven M. Dettelbach (together, the “Defendants”) oppose the motion.² Doc. No. 43. As explained below, the motion for injunctive relief is denied, and the motion for oral argument is now moot.

I. BACKGROUND

The Plaintiffs are one individual, one business entity, two organizations, and seventeen states. Doc. No. 22, ¶¶ 4-6, 11. Eliezer Jimenez (“Jimenez”) is a firearms owner residing in Grand Forks, North Dakota. Id. ¶ 4. Jimenez buys parts, “including unfinished frames or receivers, tools, jigs, and other items to assist him in making firearms” from online retailers. Id. Morehouse Enterprise, LLC, d/b/a Bridge City Ordnance (“Bridge City”) is located in Valley City, North Dakota, and holds an active federal firearms license, deals in firearms, and its otherwise an entity regulated by ATF. Id.

Gun Owners of America (“GOA”) is a California non-stock corporation with its principal place of business in Springfield, Virginia. Id. ¶ 5. “GOA was formed in 1976, to preserve and defend the Second Amendment rights of gun owners.” Id. GOA has more than 2 million members and supporters across the country, including residents of this District. Id. Gun Owners Foundation

² Four amici curiae parties submitted briefs joining the Defendants opposition to the motion – (1) Jonathan Gold, Gun Owners for Safety, Jason Perry, and Scott Spreier (Doc. No. 52); (2) District of Columbia, and States California, Colorado, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Rhode Island, Washington, and Wisconsin (Doc. No. 65); (3) Gun Violence Prevention Groups (Doc. No. 66); and (4) Major Cities and Prosecutors Against Gun Violence (Doc. No. 84).

(“GOF”) is a Virginia non-stock corporation with its principal place of business in Springfield, Virginia. Id. ¶ 6. As alleged, “GOF was formed in 1983, and is organized and operated as a nonprofit legal defense and educational foundation[.]” Id.

Finally, seventeen states joined the action as Plaintiffs, including Arizona, Alaska, Arkansas, West Virginia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas, Utah, and Wyoming. Id. ¶ 11a-11q. Each Plaintiff State is a sovereign state of the United States of America and alleges that it is suing “to vindicate its sovereign, quasi-sovereign, and proprietary interests, including its interests in protecting its citizens, businesses, and tax revenue.” Id.

For the Defendants, the United States Department of Justice (the “DOJ”) is an executive agency within the federal government of the United States. Id. ¶ 12. The DOJ is headquartered in Washington, D.C. and is the agency responsible for enforcing federal firearms laws. Id. The ATF, a component of the DOJ, is headquartered in Washington, D.C. and is delegated authority to enforce federal firearms laws. Id. ¶ 13. Lastly, Defendant Steven M. Dettelbach is the Director of ATF and is responsible for overseeing the agency’s promulgation and enforcement of the challenged regulations. Id. ¶ 14.

A. The Statutory Framework

Congress passed the Gun Control Act of 1968 (the “GCA”) to address concerns of firearms moving in interstate commerce. 18 U.S.C. §§ 921 et seq. The GCA defined “firearm” to include “any weapon . . . which will or is designed to or may readily be converted to expel a projectile by the action of an explosive” and “the frame or receiver of any such weapon.” Id. § 921(a)(3). In the GCA, Congress did not define the terms “frame” or “receiver.” Among other things, Congress also requires individuals and entities that import, manufacture, or deal in firearms to have a federal firearms license (id. § 923(a)), to keep records of firearm acquisitions or transfers (id. § 923(g)(1)(A)), and to conduct background checks before transferring firearms to a non-licensee (id. § 922(t)). It also requires licensed importers and manufacturers to identify firearms by serial number on the frame or receiver of the weapon. Id. § 923(j). As is typical and expected with federal statutes, Congress delegated the responsibility for administering and enforcing the GCA to the United States Attorney General, and Congress and the Attorney General, in turn, delegated to the ATF the authority to promulgate regulations “necessary to carry out the provisions of the GCA.” Id. § 926(a). Along these same lines, the responsibility for enforcement of the National Firearms Act of 1934 (“NFA”) has been delegated to the Director of the ATF as well. See 26 U.S.C. § 7805.

Consistent with that delegation of authority, the ATF promulgated regulations as to the GCA. One such regulation defined the statutory term “frame or receiver” to “provide guidance as to which portion of a firearm was the frame or receiver for purposes of licensing, serialization, and recordkeeping[.]”³ 86 Fed. Reg. 27721 (May 21, 2022). The licensing, serialization, and record keeping “ensur[ed] that a necessary component of the weapon could be traced if later involved in a crime.” Id. That definition, however, was promulgated 50 years ago. Id. Since that time, and unsurprisingly, there have been continued technological advancements in firearms manufacturing. Id.

³ The former definition of “frame or receiver” was “that part of a firearm which provides housing for the hammer, bolt or breechblock, and firing mechanism, and which is usually threaded at its forward positions.” Final Rule, Commerce in Firearms and Ammunition, 33 Fed. Reg. 18555, 18558 (Dec. 14, 1968) (codified at 27 C.F.R. § 478.11).

B. The NPRM and the Final Rule

In 2021, in an effort to update these decades-old definitions and account for the advancements in firearms technology, the ATF began the administrative rulemaking process. To start, the ATF published a notice of proposed rulemaking (the “NPRM”) on May 21, 2021. Id. at 27720. As required, the NPRM contained the regulatory text of the proposed rule. Id. at 27741-53. It explained the ATF sought to “amend[] [its] regulations to clarify the definition of ‘firearm’ and to provide a more comprehensive definition of ‘frame or receiver’ so that those definitions more accurately reflect firearm configurations not explicitly captured under the existing definitions[.]” Id. at 27725. The NPRM also “propose[d] new terms and definitions to take into account technological developments and modern terminology in the firearms industry, as well as amendments to the marking and recordkeeping requirements that would be necessary to implement these definitions.” Id. Interested parties could submit comments on the proposed rule until August 19, 2021. Id. at 27720. In response to the NPRM, the ATF received over 290,000 public comments.

After considering the public comments, the ATF promulgated the Final Rule on April 26, 2022. The summary of the Final Rule states, in part:

The [DOJ] is amending [ATF] regulations to remove and replace the regulatory definitions of “firearm frame or receiver” and “frame or receiver” because the current regulations fail to capture the full meaning of those terms. The [DOJ] is also amending ATF’s definitions of “firearms” and “gunsmith” to clarify the meaning of those terms and to provide definitions of terms such as “complete weapon,” “complete muffler or silencer device,” “multi-piece frame or receiver,” “privately made firearm,” and “readily” for purposes of clarity given advancements in firearms technology. Further, the Department is amending ATF’s regulations on marking and recordkeeping that are necessary to implement these new or amended definitions.

Definition of “Frame or Receiver” and Identification of Firearms, 87 Fed. Reg. 24652 (April 26, 2022) (to be codified at 27 C.F.R. pts. 447, 478, and 479). The Final Rule also includes an analysis of the comments received on the NPRM and the ATF's responses. Id. at 24667-24727. As noted, the Final Rule is effective August 24, 2022. Id. at 24652.

C. Procedural History

On July 5, 2022, the Plaintiffs initiated this action against the Defendants, alleging ten causes of action, including various violations of the Administrative Procedure Act ("APA") and several constitutional claims. At its heart though, the Plaintiffs allege the ATF exceeded its statutory authority, violated the rulemaking process, created new federal law, and violated certain constitutional rights in proceeding with the Final Rule, and they seek a preliminary injunction to stop the Final Rule from taking effect on August 24, 2022.

II. LAW AND ANALYSIS

"A preliminary injunction is an extraordinary remedy never awarded as of right." Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 24 (2008). When considering a motion for preliminary injunction, the Court weighs the four factors set forth in Dataphase Systems, Inc., v. C L Systems, Inc., 640 F.2d 109 (8th Cir. 1981) (en banc): "(1) the threat of irreparable harm to the movant; (2) the state of balance between this harm and the injury that granting the injunction will inflict on other parties litigant; (3) the probability that movant will succeed on the merits; and (4) the public interest." Id. at 114. The balance of harms and public interest factors merge when the government is the opposing party (see Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 435 (2009)), and likelihood of success on the merits is the most important factor. Brady v. Nat'l Football League, 640 F.3d 785, 789 (8th Cir. 2011). The burden to demonstrate the necessity of a preliminary injunction rests with the movant. General Motors Corp. v. Harry Brown's, LLC, 563 F.3d 312, 316 (8th Cir. 2009).

A. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

Beginning with the first factor, the Plaintiffs assert they are likely to succeed on the merits because (1) the Final Rule violates the APA’s notice and comment requirement; (2) the Final Rule is not in accordance with the law and conflicts with federal law; and, (3) the Final Rule is arbitrary and capricious. The Defendants argue the Plaintiffs have not demonstrated likelihood of success on the merits, and on the facts of this case, the Court agrees with the Defendants.

1. Notice and Comment Requirement

To start, the Plaintiffs claim that the Final Rule should be enjoined because a proper notice and comment period did not take place. More specifically, the Plaintiffs posit that the Final Rule is not a “logical outgrowth” of the ATF’s NPRM.

It is a fundamental principle of administrative law that the rulemaking process must go through the “notice and comment” process detailed in 5 U.S.C. § 553. “To satisfy the APA’s notice requirement, the NPRM and the final rule need not be identical[;]” however, a final rule must be “a ‘logical outgrowth’ of its notice.” CSX Transp., Inc. v. Surface Transp. Bd., 584 F.3d 1076, 1079 (D.C. Cir. 2009). A final rule is a logical outgrowth “if interested parties ‘should have anticipated’ that the change was possible, and thus reasonably should have filed their comments on the subject during the notice-and-comment period.” Id. at 1079-80.

Here, the NPRM expressly stated the ATF’s intent to update and modernize the definition of “frame or receiver” because “most firearms currently in circulation in the United States do not have a specific part that expressly falls within the current ‘frame or receiver’ regulatory definitions.” 86 Fed. Reg. at 27727. So, in the NPRM, the ATF started with a broad definition of “frame or receiver.” Then the ATF allowed a period of public comment beginning on May 21, 2021. And after reviewing and considering the over 290,000 comments offered by the public, including those comments from the Plaintiffs, the ATF narrowed its definition of “frame and receiver.” It is difficult to conclude, under these facts, that the Final Rule is not a “logical outgrowth” of the NPRM. Indeed, this appears to present a rather textbook example of how the administrative rulemaking process must proceed under the APA.

Effectively, the Plaintiffs argue they should have received a second opportunity at the proposed rulemaking process because they could not have anticipated the Final Rule’s definition of “frame or receiver” and that there should have been a second comment period after the ATF narrowed the definitions. But the law does not support such a claim. “[I]n most cases, if the agency . . . alters its course in response to the comments it receives, little purpose would be served by a second round of comment.” American Water Works Ass’n v. EPA, 40 F.3d 1266, 1274 (D.C. Cir. 1994). Importantly, the “logical outgrowth” test applies to consider “whether a new round of notice and comment would provide the first opportunity for interested parties to offer comments that could persuade the agency to modify its rule.” Id. (emphasis added). Here, the Plaintiffs had an opportunity to offer comments on the proposed definitions. Moreover, because the Final Rule narrowed the definitions at issue in the NPRM, allowing Plaintiffs a new round of notice and comment would serve little purpose. Without question, the NPRM was sufficiently descriptive that the ATF was going to redefine “frame or receiver,” and it allowed interested parties to offer informed criticism and comment. Simply because the ATF did not adopt the Plaintiffs’ exact proposed definitions does not mean the Final Rule is not a logical outgrowth of the NPRM or that the ATF violated the APA’s notice and comment requirement. As such, the Plaintiffs have failed to demonstrate likelihood of success on the merits of this claim.

2. Accordance with the Law

Next, Plaintiffs argue the Final Rule is inconsistent with the statutory language of the GCA, which means the ATF exceeded the scope of its delegated authority. In response, the Defendants assert that the Final Rule falls well-within the ATF's agency rulemaking authority as delegated by Congress. The Court agrees with the Defendants.

As discussed above, the Attorney General is generally responsible for enforcing the GCA, and Congress expressly delegated the responsibility for administration of the GCA to the Director of the ATF. See 18 U.S.C. 926(a); see Nat'l Rifle Ass'n v. Brady, 914 F.2d 475, 479 (4th Cir. 1990). And to be sure, no one disputes the ATF's authority to develop rules to interpret and enforce the GCA. Rather, the question is whether the Final Rule is inconsistent with and contradicts the plain language of the GCA itself. Of course, if the Final Rule did contradict the plain language of the GCA, that would result in an agency effectively circumventing the intent of Congress.

a. Definition of Firearm and "The" Frame or Receiver

According to the Plaintiffs, the Final Rule conflicts with the plain language of the GCA in several ways. For instance, 18 U.S.C. § 921(a)(3) defines "firearm" as the part that is "the frame or receiver of any such weapon[.]" (Emphasis added). The use of the word "the," per the Plaintiffs, suggests a singular object, where each "firearm" contains only ("the") one "frame" or one "receiver." The Plaintiffs say, however, that the Final Rule results in a regulatory scheme where firearms could have multiple frames or receivers. However, after carefully reading the Final Rule itself, the Court disagrees.

While the NPRM contemplated that a firearm may have multiple components constituting a "frame or receiver," the Final Rule explicitly addresses this concern and states multiple times that only a single component for each weapon will constitute the frame or receiver. 87 Fed. Reg.

at 24683, 24688. Indeed, the Final Rule states: “The [ATF] agrees with numerous commenters that the context of the singular terms ‘frame’ and ‘receiver’ in these provisions suggests that a firearm only has one frame or receiver.” Id. at 24683. And, the Final Rule recognizes that the subparts of a multi-piece frame or receiver should be considered a single frame or receiver and requires such components to be marked with a serial number (and if sold together, with the same serial number). Id. at 24739. Accordingly, while highly technical, the Final Rules appears to be consistent with the GCA in recognizing a single frame or receiver.

b. Definition of Firearm and Weapon Parts Kits

The Plaintiffs next argue that the Final Rule’s amended definition of “firearm” is inconsistent with the GCA because it includes “a weapon parts kit that is designed to or may readily be completed, assembled, restored, or otherwise converted to expel a projectile by the action of an explosive.” Doc. No. 14 at 9-10. Notably though, the GCA itself defines “firearm” as “any weapon (including a starter gun) which will or is designed to or may readily be converted to expel a projectile by the action of an explosive[.]” 18 U.S.C. § 921(a)(3)(A) (emphasis added).

A plain reading of the GCA confirms that Congress defined “firearm” more broadly than simply a fully operational weapon, as the statute expressly includes items that “may readily be converted to expel a projectile.” The language from the Final Rule—“completed, assembled, restored, or otherwise converted,” as well as the weapon kits at issue—fit squarely within the GCA’s “firearm” definition because after delivery, the kits are easily converted from mere parts into a weapon that expels a projectile. This interpretation mirrors existing Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals case law, which suggests a non-operational weapon, that can be made operational, qualifies as a firearm. See United States v. Annis, 446 F.3d 852, 857 (8th Cir. 2006). Accordingly, the ATF did not act inconsistently with the GCA in considering weapon kits as firearms under federal law.

c. Definition of Frame or Receiver and “Readily”

The Plaintiffs further argue that the Final Rule’s definition of “frame or receiver” is contrary to the GCA because it improperly uses the term “readily” from the statutory definition of “firearm.” Doc. No. 14 at 9. Critically though, the GCA does not define the term “frame or receiver,” which leaves the regulation of what constitutes a frame or receiver to the discretion of the ATF. In turn, the ATF’s update of the definition of “frame or receiver” includes items that “may readily be completed, assembled, restored, or otherwise converted.” From the Plaintiffs’ perspective, this creates a “regulatory glob” that conflates the statutory definition of “firearm” with the regulatory definition of “frame or receiver.”

Again, after reading the Final Rule, the Plaintiffs’ argument misses the mark. As an initial matter, the Final Rule does not improperly use the statutory term “readily.” To the contrary, and as noted above, adopting Plaintiffs’ position would appear to contradict the plain language of the GCA, which clearly defined “firearms” more broadly than a fully operational weapon. Additionally, the relevant text of the Final Rule makes it clear that certain weapon parts kits (which are considered a weapon under 18 U.S.C. § 921(a)(3)(A)) and certain frame or receiver kits (which are considered a frame or receiver of a weapon because they can be “readily” converted to be a frame or receiver of a weapon under 18 U.S.C. § 921(a)(3)(B)), are considered firearms for different reasons. As the Plaintiffs point out, under the final rule, it is possible that a “frame or receiver” may be considered a firearm much sooner in the process than a “weapon.” But critically, the Plaintiffs have pointed to no provision of federal law foreclosing this possibility, and this distinction cuts against the assertion that ATF has conflated the statutory definition of firearm with the Final Rule's definition of "frame or receiver."

d. Creation of New Federal Crimes

Next, the Plaintiffs claim the ATF exceeded its statutory authority because the Final Rule creates new crimes of "conspiracy" and "structuring transactions." Doc. No. 14. at 10. Curiously, however, nothing in the text of the Final Rule creates any new federal crimes. As correctly noted by the Defendants, "conspiracy to violate" and "aiding and abetting" a violation of any underlying criminal offense have long been considered statutory violations. See 18 U.S.C. §§ 2, 371. Further, federal courts have already recognized crimes of conspiracy and aiding and abetting as violations of federal firearms laws. See United States v. Evans, 928 F.2d 858 (9th Cir. 1991); United States v. Moore, 109 F.3d 1456, 1464 (9th Cir. 1997); United States v. Garcia-Pena, 743 F.2d 1462, 1464 (11th Cir. 1984); Armament Servs. Int'l Inc. v. Att'y Gen. United States, 760 F. App'x 114, 120 (3d Cir. 2019). The Court further disagrees that the Final Rule creates a new crime of "structuring," as the Final Rule only provides that one cannot conceal their transfer of a disassembled firearm in more than one box or shipment, which is consistent with the intent of the GCA and within the scope of the ATF to regulate.

e. Creation of "Privately Made Firearm"

The Plaintiffs' next argument is that the Final Rule conflicts with the GCA because it creates the term "privately made firearm" ("PMF"), which is not mentioned in either the GCA or any existing regulations. More to the point, the Plaintiffs assert that the ATF has improperly conjured up the term PMF to violate the rights of privately made firearm owners. They argue the PMF definition conflicts with the GCA because "there is no federal prohibition on an individual manufacturing his own firearm for personal use,” and the GCA does not require PMFs be marked with serial numbers, as the Final Rule now requires. Doc. No. 14 at 10-11.

Again, the Plaintiffs’ argument is based on an inaccurate and imprecise view and description of the Final Rule. In reality, the Final Rule does not prohibit any individual from manufacturing a firearm for personal use. PMFs are only implicated by the Final Rule to the extent it requires federal firearms licensees (“FFLs”) to “legibly and conspicuously identify each” PMF that is taken into inventory within seven days of receipt or acquisition. 87 Fed. Reg. at 24742. Essentially, the Final Rule only requires FFLs⁴ to serialize any unserialized PMF when it reaches the stream of commerce. Id. at 24746. Any suggestion the Final Rule prohibits manufacture or ownership of PMFs is misleading at best. Relatedly, the Plaintiffs argue the PMF serialization requirement for FFLs creates a new federal crime of obliteration of a PMF serial number. However, the obliteration of a PMF serial number would be treated the same as obliteration of any firearm’s serial number, which has long been a crime under federal law. See 18 U.S.C. § 922(k); 26 U.S.C. § 5861(h).

Further, while PMF is not a term included in the GCA or prior regulations, the Court fails to see any logic or authority for the proposition that the ATF cannot define a new term as necessary to enforce the GCA through regulation. There is nothing in the GCA prohibiting the ATF from delineating between different categories of firearms to accomplish the goal of interpreting and enforcing the GCA.

In reality, the relevant distinction between a PMF and any other firearm is the lack of a serial number. The Final Rule does not require that all PMFs receive a serial number—it only requires a PMF entering commerce through an FFL to be given a serial number. While the Plaintiffs argue otherwise, the ATF’s requirement to serialize PMFs entering the stream of commerce is consistent with its authority to take actions “necessary to carry out the provisions” of the GCA, as well as the narrower delegation of authority to regulate an FFL’s “records of importation, production, shipment, receipt, sale, or other disposition of firearms” under § 923(g)(1). Without a serial number, PMFs become untraceable firearms—an outcome the ATF is well within its regulatory authority to prevent.

f. Complete Muffler or Silencer Device

Next, the Plaintiffs argue that in creating a new definition for a “complete muffler or silencer device,” the Final Rule essentially deletes the statutory requirements that a combination of parts constituting a silencer be “designed” and “intended” for that purpose. Doc No. 14 at 11. Instead, according to the Plaintiffs, the Final Rule would classify a silencer as any group of parts that merely “contains all the component parts necessary to function,” which potentially criminalizes innocent ownership of countless innocuous household items. Id.

And once again, after reading the Final Rule, the Court disagrees. The definition of “complete muffler or silencer device” only pertains to “[a] firearm muffler or firearm silencer that contains all component parts necessary to function[.]” 87 Fed. Reg. at 24734 (emphasis added). Stated another way, the Final Rule only applies to items that already meet the definition of “firearm muffler” or “firearm silencer” under 18 U.S.C. § 921(a)(25), which specifically defines those terms, in part, as “any combination of parts, designed or redesigned, and intended for use in assembling or fabricating a firearm silencer or firearm muffler.” As such, the “designed” and

Relatedly, the Plaintiffs also assert the Final Rule conflicts with the GCA in creating and defining a new statutory term of “firearm muffler or silencer frame or receiver.” Doc. No. 14 at 11. The statutory definition of “firearm” includes “any firearm muffler or firearm silencer.” 18 U.S.C. § 921(a)(3). Under the NFA, the ATF is specifically charged with issuing regulations regarding the identification of firearms. See 26 U.S.C. § 5842. Under 26 U.S.C. § 5842(a), “[e]ach manufacturer and importer and anyone making a firearm shall identify each firearm . . . by a serial number which may not be readily removed, obliterated, or altered . . . as [the ATF] may by regulations prescribe.” 26 U.S.C. § 5842(a). As discussed, the Final Rule specifically seeks to identify firearms with a single serial number. 87 Fed. Reg. at 24723. Accordingly, a firearm muffler or firearm silencer must have a frame or receiver, so that manufacturers know which part must be serialized.

g. National Gun Registry

Continuing on, the Plaintiffs next assert the Final Rule violates 18 U.S.C. § 926(a), which prohibits the Attorney General from promulgating any new regulations requiring the records that must be maintained under the GCA “be recorded at or transferred to a facility owned, managed, or controlled by the United States or any State or any political subdivision thereof,” or establishing any “system of registration of firearms.” Id. Here, the Final Rule simply extends the period an FFL must maintain the records of its firearm sales from 20 years to the duration of the FFL’s business. 87 Fed. Reg. at 24690. This extension does not create a new regulation requiring the recording or transfer of firearms records to a government facility and in no way results in a national firearm registration. To make such assertions in the face of the plain text of the Final Rule certainly strains credibility. The Final Rule is consistent with 18 U.S.C. § 926(a).

h. Repudiated Legal Test

Finally, the Plaintiffs argue the Final Rule is contrary to law because it is based upon a “repudiated legal test.” Specifically, several comments received during the notice and comment period expressed concerns that the NPRM may potentially violate the Second Amendment. 87 Fed. Reg. at 24676. In response, the Final Rule included a brief statement positing that the rule was consistent with the United States Supreme Court’s decision in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008) because there are compelling governmental interests in the serialization of privately made firearms. Id. The Final Rule also discusses other cases that considered the Government’s interest in regulating firearms. Id. However, as recently as two months ago, the Supreme Court declined to weigh the Government’s interest in regulating firearms, which distinguishes Heller and its progeny, at least to some degree. See generally N.Y. State Rifle & Pistol Ass’n v. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. 2111 (2022).

As an initial matter, while not specifically argued by the Plaintiffs, the Court believes the ATF’s response to the Second Amendment concerns brought up during the notice and comment period to the NPRM was sufficient. As noted in the Final Rule, concerns regarding constitutionality of the proposed rule were raised by multiple commenters. The ATF appropriately responded by indicating its belief that the proposed rule was consistent with Second Amendment jurisprudence at the time the Final Rule was drafted and explained why. It is difficult to fathom what more the ATF could have said in response at the time, as it could not have predicted the future development in the law.

Turning to the substance of Bruen, that case concerned an unconstitutional “proper cause” requirement for issuance of conceal and carry permits in the State of New York—quite distinguishable from the facts here. Nonetheless, the question is whether the Final Rule would pass constitutional muster post-Bruen where, as the Court reads Bruen, an individual’s right to keep and bear arms for self-defense may not be arbitrarily denied by a state. From the outset, however, it is crucial to note the Final Rule concerns the commercial sale of firearms. The Final Rule does not infringe on any individuals’ or business’ ability to completely manufacture a firearm for personal use, nor does it restrict the ability to obtain the weapon kits at issue. Instead, the Final Rule simply requires serialization of a firearm, when in the stream of commerce, so that it may be tracked in the event a crime is committed with the firearm. There is a longstanding distinction between the right to keep and bears arms and commercial regulation of firearm sales. See District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 626-27 (2008); McDonald v. City of Chicago, 561 U.S. 742, 786 (2010); Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2162 (Kavanaugh, J., concurring) (reiterating that many regulations of firearms, including commercial regulations, remain consistent with the Second Amendment). As such, in this Court’s view, the Final Rule was and remains constitutional under the Second Amendment.

Despite the multitude of arguments to the contrary advanced by the Plaintiffs, the Court cannot conclude they have met their burden of showing the Final Rule is not in accordance with the law. As such, the Plaintiffs have not demonstrated a likelihood of success on these claims.

3. Arbitrary and Capricious

With that set of arguments resolved, the remaining merits arguments by the Plaintiffs focus on whether the Final Rule is arbitrary and capricious. The arbitrary and capricious standard “is a highly deferential standard of review.” Adventist Health Sys./SunBelt, Inc. v. HHS, 17 F.4th 793, 803 (8th Cir. 2021). “[T]he role of courts in reviewing arbitrary and capricious challenges is to simply ensure that the agency has acted within a zone of reasonableness.” Biden v. Missouri, 142 S. Ct. 647, 654 (2022). The reviewing court “defers to agency action so long as an agency examined the relevant data and articulated a satisfactory explanation for its action.” Adventist Health Sys./SunBelt, 17 F.4th at 803. A court may not substitute its judgment for that of the agency Id. “[A]n agency rule [is] arbitrary and capricious if the agency has relied on factors which Congress has not intended it to consider, entirely failed to consider an important aspect of the problem, offered an explanation for its decision that runs counter to the evidence before the agency, or is so implausible that it could not be ascribed to a difference in view or the product of agency expertise.” Motor Vehicle Mfrs. Ass’n v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 463 U.S. 29, 43 (1983). The Plaintiffs argue the Final Rule has each of these “in spades.” Doc. No. 14 at 15. However, after thorough review, the Court disagrees.

a. Internally Conflicting

To begin, the Plaintiffs argue the Final Rule is not the product of reasoned decision-making because it is internally conflicting. A promulgated regulation is internally conflicting when it advances two diametric approaches to solve the same problem, reaches dissimilar results for nearly identical items, or is not a product of reasoned decision-making. See AFGE, Local 2924 v. FLRA, 470 F.3d 375, 380 (D.C. Cir. 2006).

First, the Plaintiffs allege the Final Rule presumes that any serialized part of a firearm is the firearm’s frame or receiver, which may lead to situations where a firearm has multiple frames or receivers. As noted previously, the ATF modified the Final Rule and agreed with many commenters that there should be only one “frame” for a handgun, and only one “receiver” for a long gun. Though the Final Rule presumes the marked subparts of a multi-piece frame or receiver to be parts of a weapon’s “frame” or “receiver,” when these subparts are assembled, they comprise a single frame or receiver. So, while undoubtedly technical, as the Court reads the Final Rule, a firearm can have but one frame or receiver, which is internally consistent.

Next, the Plaintiffs argue that after laying out the new regulatory definition of “frame or receiver,” the Final Rule contains a “nonexclusive list” of firearms whose prior classifications conflict with that definition, yet are not overruled (Doc. No. 14 at 15), and that this will lead to significant confusion regarding whether certain firearms are subject to the Final Rule. Id. Nevertheless, the Final Rule states that all ATF classifications of existing complete frame or receiver designs that the agency determined before April 26, 2022, to be the firearm “frame or receiver” remain effective. See 87 Fed. Reg. at 24739. While again highly technical, as the Court reads the Final Rule, manufacturers can ensure compliance by determining whether the classification was issued before April 26, 2022, and whether the weapon was complete and assembled when it was submitted for the ATF’s examination. Id. at 24739, 24741.

The Plaintiffs then argue the Final Rule is internally conflicting because of dissimilar treatment of functionally identical items, such as top/bottom “split” receivers (where only one portion is serialized) versus left/right “multi-piece” receivers (where both portions are serialized). Doc. No. 14 at 16. However, the Final Rule thoroughly explains the different treatment of split and multi-piece receivers, and the ATF’s reasons for treating these two types of receivers differently for purposes of serialization.

A “split” frame or receiver typically has two different parts that house one or more fire control components, which are referred to as the “upper” and “lower” portions of the receiver. 87 Fed. Reg. at 24652, 24655. Under the Final Rule’s definition of “frame” and “receiver,” only one of these two parts is the “frame” or “receiver.” 87 Fed. Reg. at 24735. This is done so that the firearm will have only one serial number.

A “multi-piece” frame or receiver is one that can be disassembled into multiple modular subparts (i.e., standardized units that may be replaced or exchanged). 87 Fed. Reg. at 24671; 24739. The Final Rule includes a definition of “multi-piece frame or receiver,” (id. at 24671), and explains which portion(s) of a multi-piece receiver needs to be serialized. 87 Fed. Reg. at 24747. In general, the outermost housing designed to house either the sear, the bolt, or breechblock must contain the serial number. Id. at 24747; see also id. at 24671-72. And if more than one outermost subpart is similarly designed to provide a structure for these components, each of those subparts must be identified with the serial number. Id. at 24671-72, 24747. Without this requirement, multi-piece frames or receivers could be broken down and sold as individual subparts and replaced without any traceable marks of identification. Id. at 24672. Given this distinction, the need for distinguishing between split and multi-piece frames is quite clear and appears to be the product of thoughtful and reasoned decision-making.

b. Policy Shifts

Next, the Plaintiffs argue the ATF has failed to appropriately explain their significant policy shifts. An agency changing its position must “display awareness that it is changing position . . . and may sometimes need to account for prior factfinding or certain reliance interests created by a prior policy[.]” FCC v. Fox TV Stations, Inc., 556 U.S. 502, 503 (2009). However, [w]hen an agency reverses its prior policy, ‘it need not demonstrate . . . that the reasons for the new policy are better than the reasons for the old one.’” Northport Health Servs. v. HHS, 14 F.4th 856, 875 (8th Cir. 2021). “[I]t suffices that the new policy is permissible under the statute, that there are good reasons for it, and that the agency believes it to be better, which the conscious change of course adequately indicates.” Id.

Here the Plaintiffs rekindle their argument regarding the definition of multi-piece frames or receivers as not being adequately explained for policy purposes. However, because the policy is that a multi-piece frame or receiver is defined as “a frame or receiver that may be disassembled into multiple modular subparts” (87 Fed. Reg. at 24739), requiring multiple, but identical, serial numbers on any subparts entering the stream of commerce is necessary if the ATF wishes to track the subparts when sold in piecemeal fashion. As the Court sees it, this adequately explains the unique serialization requirement of multi-piece frames or receivers.

The Plaintiffs then rehash their argument as to the use and definition of the term “readily” as it applies to unfinished 80% frames and receivers as being a significant shift in policy. The parties each go deep into detail regarding the alleged policy shift; however, such depth is unnecessary. Without a doubt, the Final Rule adequately explains the policy shift to regulate weapon kits more tightly, as these wholly untraceable weapons present serious challenges for law enforcement and the community. While the ATF’s prior approach may have focused on the specific degree of machining related to the weapon kits, the goal of serializing the frames and receivers entering commerce fully explains any changes.

Further, the Plaintiffs assert the Final Rule makes the existing ATF classification system even worse by formally adopting a recent ATF policy change to refuse to classify numerous firearms related items and also creating a new requirement that the industry seek ATF guidance through submissions filed under penalty of perjury. Codification of the ATF’s position regarding classification cannot be considered a change in policy as it has been the ATF’s formal position since 2018. Compare ATF, Notice: Discontinuance of Accessory Classifications (last reviewed Dec. 11, 2018) <https://www.atf.gov/firearms/notice-discontinuance-accessory-classifications>, with 87 Fed. Reg. at 24743.

Additionally, while the Final Rule does not explicitly explain the requirement of firearms classifications to be requested under penalty of perjury, it does stand to reason that these statements must be truthful to be considered. In any event, it is already a crime to “make any materially false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement or representation” or “mak[ing] or us[ing] any false writing or document knowing the same to contain” such a statement or representation “within the jurisdiction of the executive . . . branch” of the United States. 18 U.S.C. § 1001. As such, the requirement that individuals submit classification requests under penalty of perjury does not appear to be a significant change to the ATF’s policy.

Finally, the Plaintiffs assert that the ATF has not previously considered certain parts kits that may readily be converted to functioning firearms to constitute “firearms” under the GCA and as such, has failed to properly explain and justify the new regulations in the Final Rule. Doc. No. 14 at 19-20. Along these same lines, the Plaintiffs argue the ATF has made a significant policy shift by regulating firearm parts instead of only frames and receivers. Id. As discussed above, a non-operational weapon which can be made operational already qualifies as a firearm under 18 U.S.C. § 921(a)(3)(A). As a result, regulating a non-operational kit that can be readily turned into an operational firearm is not a significant change. Further, any adjustments to the way these kits, or the parts they contain, are treated has been thoroughly explained. See 87 Fed. Reg. at 24652, 24688-89.

c. Consideration of Comments

The final subset of Plaintiffs’ arguments as to the Final Rule being arbitrary and capricious is that the ATF did not appropriately respond to relevant comments. As part of the APA’s notice and comment process, a federal agency is required to, “[a]fter consideration of the relevant matter presented . . . incorporate in the rules adopted a concise general statement of their basis and purpose.” 5 U.S.C. § 553(c). Further, “although an agency ‘need not address every comment’ . . . ‘it must respond in a reasoned manner to those that raise significant problems,’ and “the failure to respond to comments is significant [because] it demonstrates that the agency’s decision was not based on a consideration of the relevant factors.” Huntco Pawn Holdings, LLC v. United States DOD, 240 F. Supp. 3d 206, 219 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (citations omitted); see also Champion v. Shalala, 33 F.3d 963, 966 n.4 (8th Cir. 1994) (conducting the same analysis).

First, the Plaintiffs contend that their comment indicating the GCA authorizes licensed manufacturers and importers—but not licensed dealers—to mark firearms was not given proper consideration. However, in response to this assertion, the ATF explained that in enacting the GCA, Congress understood that persons and entities other than licensed manufacturers and importers may need to mark firearms. 87 Fed. Reg. at 24687. Further, the ATF has the authority to promulgate regulations necessary to enforce the GCA and requiring licensed dealers to mark PMFs is squarely within the ATF’s regulatory authority. Id. The GCA requires FFLs to record firearm information for purposes of tracing, but as discussed, some PMFs have no serial number to record. Requiring licensed dealers—like licensed manufacturers and importers—to mark these firearms as they enter commerce is necessary to fulfill Congress’s intent to allow for tracing of commercially sold firearms. Id. The Court finds the ATF’s response appropriate and legally accurate.

Additionally, the Plaintiffs argue that the ATF did not adequately respond to a comment raising concerns that the Final Rule does not require the agency to notify the submitter of a voluntary classification request that the agency has accepted or rejected the request. However, the ATF did respond and disagreed. 87 Fed. Reg. at 24709. The ATF explained that while it was willing to help individuals and entities achieve compliance, there is no requirement that they do so or that they complete the task in a certain timeframe. Id. at 24709-10. While the Plaintiffs may not like the response they received, the ATF did adequately respond and explain its position.

After considering all the arguments advanced by the Plaintiffs, the Court cannot conclude they have met their burden of showing the Final Rule is arbitrary and capricious. As such, the Plaintiffs have not demonstrated a likelihood of success on these claims either.⁵

B. Remaining Preliminary Injunction Factors

Because the Plaintiffs are unlikely to succeed on the merits of their claims, consideration of the remaining factors is unnecessary. See Planned Parenthood Minn., N.D., S.D. v. Rounds, 530 F.3d 724, 737 (8th Cir. 2008) (en banc). That said, the remaining factors (irreparable harm and the balance of equities and public interest) also weigh against a preliminary injunction.

As to irreparable harm, the timeline for the filing of the motion for preliminary injunction gives the Court serious pause. The ATF issued the Final Rule on April 26, 2022, and the Plaintiffs, given their activity in the notice and comment period, were certainly aware of the Final Rule when it was issued. Nonetheless, the Plaintiffs waited until July 25, 2022 (or essentially three months) to file their motion for injunctive relief. While not necessarily dispositive of the outcome, the delay here tends to weigh against a finding of irreparable harm. Novus Franchising, Inc. v. Dawson, 725 F.3d 885, 894 (8th Cir. 2013); Adventist Health Sys./SunBelt, Inc. v. United States Dep't of Health & Hum. Servs., 17 F.4th 793, 806 (8th Cir. 2021).

Setting the timing issue aside, the irreparable harm alleged by the Plaintiffs largely consists of arguments that the Final Rule is vague, will cause uncertainty, and will result in businesses needing to “revamp business practices” and stop selling certain products. Doc. No. 14 at 25. However, uncertainty because of a new federal regulation certainly does not constitute irreparable harm, and “ordinary compliance costs are typically insufficient to constitute irreparable harm.” Freedom Holding, Inc. v. Spitzer, 408 F.3d 112, 115 (2d Cir. 2005); see also Am. Hosp. Ass’n v. Harris, 625 F.2d 1328, 1331 (7th Cir. 1980). Indeed, much of the alleged irreparable harm is entirely speculative and is not the type of “great” harm that constitutes irreparable harm for the purposes of a preliminary injunction. Roudachevski v. All-Am. Care Ctrs., Inc., 648 F.3d 701, 706 (8th Cir. 2011) (harm must be certain and great and of such imminence that there is a clear and present need for equitable relief). Thus, the Court concludes the Plaintiffs have not met their burden to demonstrate irreparable harm.

The final factor, balance of the equities and public interest, is perhaps a closer call, but given the failure to demonstrate likelihood of success on the merits and irreparable harm, the Court concludes this final factor also weighs against injunctive relief. The rather speculative risk of harm to the Plaintiffs, on the one hand, does not outweigh the harm to the ATF’s interest in law enforcement and public safety, on the other. Moreover, there would be consequences to the public as well if the Final Rule is enjoined. See Weinberger v. Romero-Barcelo, 456 U.S. 305, 312 (1982) (courts must consider the public consequences when deciding whether to employ the extraordinary remedy of injunction).

In conclusion, the Plaintiffs have failed to demonstrate likelihood of success on the merits and irreparable harm. Accordingly, the balance of the Dataphase factors weigh against injunctive relief, and the Court denies the Plaintiffs’ motion for a preliminary and/or permanent injunction.

C. Corrections to the Final Rule

Finally, on August 22, 2022, the ATF issued corrections to the Final Rule (the “Corrections”), explaining that “[d]ue to the complexity of this rulemaking process and the resulting significant number of comments and revisions in response, the final rule inadvertently contained some technical errors in the regulatory text that this document corrects.” Definition of “Frame or Receiver” and Identification of Firearms; Corrections, 87 Fed. Reg. 51249 (August 22, 2022). The Corrections list eight technical errors, noting it “corrects those technical errors before the final rule’s effective date.” Id. (emphasis added). That same day, Plaintiffs filed a “Supplemental Memorandum In Response to ATF’s Notice of Amended Regulations,” arguing that the ATF has failed to publish its corrections as required by the APA, among other things. Doc. No. 83 at 2 (citing 5 U.S.C. § 553(d)).

The Court has independently reviewed the Corrections and disagrees. Here, the Corrections were issued before the Final Rule’s effective date and are simply a correction of technical or clerical errors. Accordingly, as the Court sees it, the Corrections are a logical outgrowth of the proposed rule and do not trigger a new notice and comment period. Nevertheless, assuming arguendo, that the Plaintiffs are correct, and the Corrections violated the notice and comment period of the APA, the Plaintiffs have failed to cite any authority that this would lead to invalidation of the entirety of the Final Rule. To the contrary, the cases cited by Plaintiffs appear to support a finding that, at best, only the Corrections would be invalidated. See Util. Solid Waste Activities Grp. v. E.P.A., 236 F.3d 749, 755 (D.C. Cir. 2001) (“Finding the amendment, as opposed to the rule, violated the APA’s procedural requirement—the Court set aside the amendment). Additionally, within the context of the preliminary injunction, as these changes are merely technical, they have no substantive impact on the outcome of the Court’s decision.

III. CONCLUSION

Without a doubt, this case presents divisive issues that all parties care about deeply and that are of national concern and importance, as demonstrated by the participation of nearly every state in this country in this action. Nevertheless, the Court's role and responsibility remains the same—to apply the law to the facts (and not the arguments or policy) of each case. After doing so here, the balance of the Dataphase factors do not weigh in favor of granting the Plaintiffs a preliminary injunction. Accordingly, the motions (Doc. Nos. 14 and 19) are DENIED, and the Court FINDS AS MOOT the Plaintiffs' motion for oral argument (Doc. No. 25).

IT IS SO ORDERED.
